

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved my family's time at home. We can now enjoy meaningful conversation instead of the constant invasion of my home by unwanted, soliciting calls. Before I signed up for Indiana's "no call list" I was receiving at least 15 unwanted calls per week, now, thanks to the Indiana Telephone Privacy law, I receive virtually none. I was utterly offended that I had to purchase call waiting devices and monthly service just to protect myself from such invasions. And still, with only limited success. Our personal protection through this law is critical and any effort by the FCC to overturn this and violate my personal right to privacy is un-American.
